

Instagram Algorithm Changed And Here Is What You Need To Know For You Grow Your Instagram Account

By Benjamin.

If you've been noticing a decrease in the amount of views that you've been getting on Instagram and the amount of followers that you're getting it's because the Instagram algorithm has recently changed but don't worry by the end of this training you're going to know exactly what features you need to be using, how often you should be posting and even what your post should be about and two other secret things that are going to help you get more views and more followers on Instagram.

Recently I just helped a Creator gain 20 000 followers in just 30 days and another creator over 50 000 followers and all they did was implement the tips that I'm about to share with you in this training and that's the reason that they saw meteoric growth.

In fact one of those creators was actually able to quit his job literally only to post on Instagram.

I'm gonna share with you in this training exactly how you could do the same.

First and foremost this is temporary. Instagram has begun pushing out photos a lot more than they were in the past.

In the past they were literally only pushing out reels but now they're beginning to push out photos.

You only need to make sure that you're doing a carousel.

If you go to your Explorer page you will see amazing carousels.

The reason that they're amazing is that they have some kind of hook in them that was made with canva and then they have two to four different swipe throughs.

This is the type of photo content you need to be doing if you want to upload photos to Instagram.

Anyway you shouldn't only be uploading photos or you should upload one photo a day at Max and the rest of your post should be reel.

Now you're probably wondering Rob how often should I actually be posting?

Well I'm going to share that with you later on in this training.

For now we need to talk about some other things you need to be doing in your reels.

The other thing that you need to make sure that you're doing is putting text on the screen

If you would ask me six or nine months ago I would have said do not put text on your screen since Instagram didn't like that but now Instagram does like that.

You want to know why they like it? It's because they're optimizing for watch time.

Now do you know what optimizing for watch time means? it means that people need to be watching your videos and people need to be clicking on your videos.

You need to realize something, the majority of people that scroll on Instagram do not have their sound on because they might be at school, on the bus, they might be at dinner with their girlfriend or their significant other and that is why they don't have their sound on.

So they're scrolling and they will only turn that sound off if something attracts them.

The way that you're going to attract them is by simply adding captions or a hook onto your screen.

This is because if you do not have that it's not going to capture people and if you do not capture people they're not going to watch a video and if they don't watch a video you're not hitting the metric that the Instagram algorithm cares about right now and that is why your videos aren't getting pushed out.

I know a lot of you guys don't want to use captions because you don't want a paint editor or you think it's going to take a really long time for you to edit that stuff.

So another thing that you could do is add green screens into your content.

This will be useful if you're actually providing value to the audience which starts with you hooking them in and making sure that you're uploading the right content.

Now the best times to post on Instagram have recently changed also and there are three new best times to post.

You need to make sure that you're posting at these times because if you're not people aren't going to see your videos but before I tell you the three best times I need to make sure that you understand something.

You shouldn't be posting at 11 o'clock you shouldn't be posting at 12:30.

I mean you don't want to post on the hour or on the half hour because there's an increased amount of competition because so many people are scheduling their posts at those times.

So instead if I say post from 9am to 11AM which by the way is the first best time to be posting don't post at 9am exactly, post at 9:02am or post at 9:12am or post at 9:32am because this is going to decrease the amount of competition that you're seeing on Instagram and it's going to help you get more views.

The two other best times to be posting are from 1 to 3 P.M and then 7 to 10 p.m.

Like I said the time that you're posting is going to make a big difference.

Now before I share with you exactly how many times you should be posting on Instagram a day I need to make sure that you're also doing another thing right.

if you go and scroll the reels feed right now eventually you will see a template pop up.

It'll look like all black of a screen and then it'll have three different posts.

it'll say use this template.

Essentially it's going to give you a sound and it's going to give a post type that is trending.

I strongly suggest you guys begin implementing this.

Instagram is literally telling you that they're pushing out content that has that sound or that has that template.

You would be an idiot to ignore this and it's something that I strongly recommend you do.

In fact I think once a day you should be posting one of those templates because it's going to help you get more views.

it's going to really easily show you what is actually trending.

so when you click into that you can see all the other posts that are working.

you can see the topics, you can see the formats, you can see the hook that they use and that is what you need to be taking into account because one of the things that I see so many creators mess up on Instagram right now is they're not actually posting the right content.

They're not posting the type of things that do well on Instagram.

Either one they're posting way too many photos

Two, they're posting content that is just way too long when Instagram is prioritizing short form content right now.

Again your Instagram algorithm is just a dumbed down version of the YouTube and Tik Tok algorithm.

YouTube and Tick Tock really care about watch time but they also will push out a video to 30-60 seconds long if it gets a good amount of watch time.

Instagram's algorithms is not that smart.

so what you want to do is to create shorter videos so they can get higher watch time and then your content is going to get pushed out more than everybody else's content.

Way too many of you are just having long-winding conversations on Instagram that is one of the reasons that you're not successful.

Another thing that I see so many creators doing is they're telling people to go to the link in the Bio

I would suggest you do not do this on Instagram the reason being, Instagram isn't going to push out content in which you say something like that.

It would actually do way better is if you tell them to DM you something because this is to do two things.

one, it's going to cause engagement.

two, you could just tell them to comment the word below because again it's going to cause engagement.

Anyway remember that the biggest signal that Instagram wants to see is that somebody clicked on your profile and went to your profile.

But telling them to go to the link in your bio is actually something that Instagram is going to suppress.

If instead you tell them to DM you they'll still take that same action but they won't be leaving Instagram because at the end of the day Instagram wants to keep people on Instagram.

That's why you can shop on Instagram and you could do all these things on Instagram.

That's exactly why they don't want you telling people to go to the link in your bio.

That brings me to the last point in this training which is that you need to be consistent on Instagram.

Instagram really isn't making people go viral every single post right now.

Instead what they're doing is they're giving creators that are posting consistently delayed explosions.

This is how a lot of small creators end up blowing up.

People that you see now that have twenty thousand, fifty thousand or a hundred thousand followers they probably didn't get there from having all of their posts blow up.

Instead they probably had one or two single post blow up that they had a call to action on and the way that they got there was by being consistent.

Way too many of you right now are posting three times one day on Instagram, zero times the next day and taking the next week off then posting again.

it's one of the worst things that you could do.

You need to continually post better content every single day and you need to make sure that you're staying consistent.

Once Instagram sees that you're staying consistent they're going to reward you with the delayed explosion which will mean that one of your new posts will take off or one of your old posts will take off and then from there if you've made a bunch of videos about that topic guess what ends up happening?

Instagram then recommends all those other videos about that topic to the individuals that saw that video that blow up.

And that is how a lot of people came along of followers quick on Instagram.
